8. The defendant, Steven M. Loeb, is an individual residing at 7 Mathews Street, Melville, New York.
9. The defendant, William Tripp, is an individual who does business as Tripp Design Naval Architecture, (hereinafter "William Tripp") located at 144 Water Street, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

FACTS

10. At all relevant times, the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, was the sole owner of all capital stock of Blad Co, and exercised control and all incidents of ownership over the sailing vessel, Sirena.
11. Upon information and belief, the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, was at all relevant times the sole officer and director of Blad Co.
12. At all relevant times, the defendant, Blad Co., owned, managed, operated and otherwise controlled the sailing vessel, Sirena.
13. Upon information and belief, the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, confused and intermingled the assets of the defendant, Blad Co., with his personal assets.

14. Upon information and belief, the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, confused and intermingled his personal activity with the business activity of the defendant, Blad Co.
15. Upon information and belief, the officers and directors of the defendant, Blad Co., were non-functioning.
16. Upon information and belief, the defendant, Blad Co., was used for transactions of the sole owner of all capital stock, the defendant, Steven M. Loeb.
17. Upon information and belief, the defendant, William Tripp, is a naval architect who designs custom built racing sailboats.
18. Upon information and belief, the defendant, William Tripp's design of custom built racing sailboats are a significant factor in the growth, productivity and profitability of Tripp Design Naval Architecture.
19. Upon information and belief, the performance of custom built racing sailboats designed, is a significant factor in the growth, productivity and profitability of Tripp Design Naval Architecture.
20. Upon information and belief, the performance of custom built racing sailboats designed by the defendant, William Tripp, is and has been advertised by Tripp Design Naval Architecture.
21. William Tripp has a significant financial incentive and commercial interest in the racing performance of custom built racing sailboats of his design.
22. Sirena is a custom built racing sailboat designed by Tripp Design Naval Architecture.
23. At all times relevant, William Tripp and Tripp Design Naval Architecture had a significant commercial interest in the racing performance of Sirena.

24. William Tripp and Tripp Design Naval Architecture advertise the racing successes of Sirena.
25. At all relevant times, Sirena was competing in a regatta conducted by the New York Yacht Club in July 2002, in Narragansett Bay, Rhode Island within navigable waters of the United States (hereinafter the "Regatta").
26. At all relevant times, the sailing vessel Sforzando was competing in the Regatta.
27. Sirena and Sforzando competed in Race Number Three of the Regatta on July 14, 2002 (hereinafter the "Race").
28. The plaintiffs, Jack Foley, Mary O'Donoghue and David Robbins, were crew members aboard Sforzando during the Race.
29. The defendant, Steven M. Loeb, was managing, operating and controlling Sirena as its skipper during the Race.
30. The defendant, William Tripp, was the tactician aboard Sirena during the Race. As tactician, William Tripp was responsible for making strategic decisions concerning the maneuvering and positioning of Sirena with respect to other vessels competing in the Race.
31. The Race was governed by the International Rules of Sailing for 2001-2004, the Prescriptions of US SAILING, a Notice of Race and the Sailing Instructions for the Race (collectively, the "Rules").
32. The Rules constituted a private contract between the participants in the Regatta, including plaintiffs, Jack Foley, Mary O'Donoghue and David Robbins, and the defendants, Steven M. Loeb, Blad Co. and William Tripp, requiring their compliance therewith.

33. At all relevant times, during the Race, Sforzando was on starboard tack, and Sirena was on port tack.
34. As the vessels approached the windward mark, Sforzando was on the starboard layline and Sirena was on a port layline.
35. As the vessels neared the windward mark, Sirena attempted to cross in front of Sforzando. On information and belief, this maneuver was made by the defendants in an effort to gain an advantage over Sforzando.
36. Sforzando had the right of way and Sirena was required to keep clear of Sforzando.
37. As the vessels neared the windward mark, Steven M. Loeb, with the assistance and direction of the defendant, William Tripp, altered Sirena's course, causing the vessels to be on a collision course, bow to bow, at a closing speed of approximately 15 knots.
38. As a direct result of the actions of the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, and the defendant, William Tripp, Sirena and Sforzando forcefully impacted on their respective starboard sides.
39. As a direct result of the collision caused by the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, and the defendant, William Tripp, the plaintiff, Jack Foley, sustained severe personal injuries.
40. As a direct result of the collision caused by the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, and the defendant, William Tripp, the plaintiff, Mary O'Donoghue, sustained severe personal injuries.
41. As a direct result of the collision caused by the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, and the defendant, William Tripp, the plaintiff, David Robbins, sustained severe personal injuries.

42. As a direct result of the collision caused by the defendant, Steven M. Loeb, and the defendant, William Tripp, Sforzando was forced to immediately withdraw from the Race and obtain medical treatment for its injured crew.
43. The Protest Committee appointed in accordance with the Rules, determined that Sirena violated Rule 10 of the Racing Rules of Sailing causing the collision during which the plaintiffs were injured.
44. As a result of the determination by the Protest Committee of the Regatta, Sirena was disqualified from the Race.
